New Jersey Libertarian

KARCZAG COVERED ON FRONT PAGE OF RUTGERS NEWSPAPER

NJLP member Chuck Karczag, of West Orange (Essex County) was covered in a front-page story featuring his photograph in The Daily Targum, the Rutgers University newspaper, on November 25. The story, entitled "Libertarian group challenges liberal slant on campus" by Brendan Prawdzik, is reprinted here in its entirety:

Chuck Karczag

Chuck Karczag dubs Rutgers, the "Moscow on the Raritan."

Yet Karczag, a Rutgers College first-year student, found the Banks to be fertile ground for the genesis of the College Libertarians, a political organization that stands out against Rutgers' liberal backdrop.

In a year that the Libertarian Party has received national exposure, Karczag said the media gave voters the wrong idea.

Although he decided to take action before the elections, media coverage was a significant influence. Many of his goals for the club focus on destroying the stereotypes.

"If Libertarians appear on the radar screen as being anti-everything freaks, that is how they will come off," Karczag said.

Karczag said he plans to hold a drug legalization rally, or an all-out war against the drinking age - two events that would appeal to Rutgers' students while adhering to party philosophy.

He acknowledges that some of the party's ideas, which include extreme government downswing, deregulation and free-market capitalism, may at first appear frightening.

"Fundamentally, we are a radical movement. You can attach a negative connotation to that, but radical just means getting to the root," said Karczag.

Although Libertarian philosophy may seem extreme, Republicans and Democrats welcome it on campus, seeing the club as a refreshing and needed addition.

REPUBLICAN LIBERTY CAUCUS COVERS SABRIN

The November/December issue of Republican Liberty, the newsletter of the Republican Liberty Caucus, included an article entitled "What can the GOP learn from Sabrin?" written by Ray Lehmann, who is identified as "Republican District Leader, Union County Republican Committee." It is reprinted here, slightly abridged:

"...Libertarian Murray Sabrin, the first third party candidate in state history to receive matching funds and earn a spot in the gubernatorial debates, was a breath of fresh air. To use the LP's terminology, Sabrin offered a sharp contrast to "McWhitman" – the incumbent Republican Governor Christie Whitman and her challenger, State Senator Jim McGreevey.

"Sabrin's visibility in the debates and on television and radio spots elevated him above the usual pack of third party wannabes.

"How did Sabrin get this attention? By focusing on issues and by seizing on the libertarian instincts that lurk, unrecognized, in the hearts of almost every American. Sabrin preached from the traditional libertarian canon – lower taxes, less regulation, more freedom – but he was also able to skillfully tailor his message to the concerns of New Jersey voters.

"The only substantial campaign issue raised by the major candidates was the high cost of auto insurance, with both Whitman and McGreevey giving it quite a bit of lip service.

"By contrast, Sabrin proposed deregulation, a bogeyman word that, nonetheless, is the only answer. Appealing to voters' common sense, he would point out that purveyors of every other form of insurance are knocking down your door offering cheaper rates to get your business. But automobile insurers, put off by ludicrous no-fault settlements, mandatory insurance and state protection of bad drivers, stay away from New Jersey. Competition will bring prices down, Sabrin explained, and many people began to understand that perhaps for the first time.

"Sabrin also appealed to the right wing that libertarians often put off. Like Ron Paul (who Sabrin says is his hero), he was pro-life in a race where both major party candidates are pro-choice. And, unlike many other libertarians, Sabrin proved adept at ducking THE question – drug legalization.

"The press focused on Sabrin's appeal to conservatives, which is testament to how liberal New Jersey's Republicans have become. But in the end, polls showed Sabrin drew voters about equally from Whitman and McGreevey.

"Ultimately, the question is – will it make a difference? Unfortunately, in the short run, I don't think so. Whitman won based on her record as one of the few politicians to make a promise – a 30 percent income tax cut – and keep it. People here are mostly happy and Sabrin's message, positive as it is, doesn't play in a state where quality of life has improved during the incumbent's tenure.

"There is speculation on whether her narrow victory and the support for Sabrin has sent a message to Christie Whitman. But realistically, despite Sabrin's popularity, neither Christie Whitman nor the state Democratic leaders are going to suddenly be reborn as libertarians.

"In the long run, I think Sabrin's greatest contribution will have been to popularize libertarianism as a philosophy in one of the least libertarian states in the country."

SABRIN HONORED BY POCONO LP

TANNERSVILLE, PA – The Pocono Libertarians honored Ramapo College Professor of Finance Dr. Murray Sabrin with their prestigious 1997 "Champion of Liberty Award" Tuesday, December 16, at the Tannersville Inn, Tannersville, PA. The award is made annually to someone who has demonstrated their ability to advance the cause of economic and personal liberty. The award is the artistic work of master artist Eric Bakke of Stroudsburg. Twenty people attended.

Sabrin was the first third party candidate to appear in all televised debates. He is a talk show host on WVNJ in Teaneck, New Jersey and the author of Tax Free 2000: The Rebirth of American Liberty.

In accepting the award, Sabrin stated, "It is an honor to receive this Champion of Liberty Award from the Pocono Libertarians. Throughout my campaign, I have been able to advance the cause of limited government, personal responsibility, and free markets. We have given the people of New Jersey and the country free market alternatives to big government."

The Pocono Libertarians was founded in 1991 and has offered monthly public forums on the topics of individual liberty, limited government, free markets, personal responsibility, and the Bill of Rights. This is the fifth year that the Champion of Liberty Award has been issued by the group.

– press release, Pocono LP

University College senior Christian LeFer, College Republicans President, said, "I'm not afraid to say that I voted for Murray Sabrin."

The policies of Sabrin, the Libertarian candidate for governor, gained the support of many potential Republican voters, offering a challenge to incumbent Christie Whitman and making for a very tight and dramatic election day.

"It got me into a little trouble, but my moral obligation to the Republican Party is that we remain morally grounded to the things the founding fathers believed in," LeFer said.

"The wonderful thing about Rutgers is that there are so many points of view that even those that fall not under the mainstream can still get consideration," Brian Selander, former president of the RU Democrats, said. "Any time you get a bunch of people together to discuss issues, it's a real growth experience."

Karczag also embraces political diversity on campus. He said even Socialists, who believe in redistribution and regulation, are welcome.

"I like the Socialists, I really do. Even at Rutgers, they have a small population, but they make a big difference. I believe that Socialists and Libertarians are among the only people willing to take off their gloves and stand on consistent principle."

Karczag insists Libertarians are not closed-minded intellectuals, but admits they are mistrustful of politicians and a large central government.

"I wouldn't trust Newt Gingrich to make a tuna-fish sandwich," he said, referring to the current Speaker of the House.

Although Republicans share some Libertarian beliefs, Karczag said the Republicans believe in moderate social regulation, while Libertarians believe that morality cannot be legislated.

BUONCRISTIANO PUBLISHED IN LIBERTY, COVERED BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

NJLP member Mike Buoncristiano of Hoboken wrote a commentary on the Sabrin Campaign which was the top story in the January issue of Liberty magazine.

The story received two separate titles: on the cover, it was called "Fear and Loathing in New Jersey," while the piece itself was entitled "The Intoxication of Murray Sabrin." The title over the piece, however, appeared beneath the underlined appellation "Audit." The piece was autobiographical, recounting the progress of the Sabrin Campaign through the eyes of Buoncristiano, who was the spokesman and Chair of the Campaign from August through the beginning of October. In the piece, Buoncristiano chides Sabrin for neglecting party-building activities and ignoring party-building tactics like putting the "800" number on signs. He also suggests that Murray's head was turned by the prospect of personal success.

The piece was covered by Ralph Siegel of the Associated Press, who wrote a short story covering Buoncristiano's story. The AP item was entitled by the New Jersey Sunday Herald of 1/4/98: "Manager claims Sabrin lost sight of Libertarian ideals."

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

"Known all over Washington as a shameless extrovert... [Pepper was] reliably reported to practice nepotism with his sister-in-law and has a sister who was once a Thespian in Greenwich Village. Worst of all, it is an established fact that Mr. Pepper, before his marriage, practiced celibacy."

– Florida Senator George Smathers, in a press release attacking his opponent, Claude Pepper, in the 1950 senatorial race.

THE TRUE COST OF WELFARE

A clear leader in the contest for most abused word in the English language is "welfare."

"Welfare" means "health, happiness, and comfort" according to Webster's, but that meaning is now secondary, as "welfare" has come to mean the government program which redistributes wealth. Modern politicians usually tout the welfare of people as the principal goal of public policy. Few question that goal, and, therefore, few question the methods used by politicians to achieve it.

Sometimes, it's hard to see the importance of methods. Perhaps what's needed are examples of methods which are now extremely unpopular. This quote from George Fitzhugh's Sociology for the South, published in 1854, could serve this purpose:

"We provide for each slave, in old age and infancy, in sickness and in health, not according to his labor, but according to his wants. . . . A southern farm is the beau ideal of Communism."

SABRIN FIGHTS TO DISPLAY CAMPAIGN POSTERS ON HIS LAWN

On October 24, Murray Sabrin came home to find a note from a police officer attached to one of the political campaign signs displayed on Murray's front lawn. The note informed Murray that the Borough of Leonia (Bergen County) has an ordinance prohibiting such yard signs.

That same day, Murray had Christopher Walsh, of Collier, Jacobs and Mills in Somerset fax a letter to the Leonia Police. Walsh then sued for, and won, a temporary restraining order and injunction, staying enforcement of the Leonia ordinance, in U.S. District Court in Newark, Nicholas Politan presiding, on October 27.

Walsh then obtained the Borough attorney's cooperation in getting a "consent order" permanently enjoining Leonia from enforcing that ordinance. The consent order was signed on November 18. Walsh also obtained payment of $7500 in attorney fees from the Borough, per Federal civil rights law (42 US Code 1988).

NJLP 1998 CONGRESSIONAL SLATE

Six NJLP members have expressed intention to run for Congress this year, in the following districts: 2, 3, 4, 5, 11, 12.

The NJLP seeks candidates for the remaining seven districts. Although the locations of the districts are briefly described here, it is NOT necessary to reside in a district in order to serve there as a candidate. One need only be a resident of New Jersey to represent any of them:

- 1) around Camden
- 6) parts of Middlesex and Monmouth Counties
- 7) parts of Essex, Union, Middlesex, and Somerset Counties
- 8) parts of Essex and Passaic Counties
- 9) parts of Bergen and Hudson Counties
- 10) parts of Essex, Hudson, and Union Counties
- 13) parts of Essex, Hudson, Union, and Middlesex Counties

More complete information defining the districts and help from those with pertinent experience are available. Members wishing to run should contact Steering Committee member Janice Presser, who offers candidates useful information. She may be reached at 609 273 3253, or at jpresser@netaxs.com.

NAME THAT SAGE

Alexis DeTocqueville

Last month's quote:

"a democratic government is the only one in which those who vote for a tax can escape the obligation to pay it."

came from: Democracy in America,
by Alexis DeTocqueville
ed. J.P.Mayer

originally published in the late 1830s.

"The public good is in nothing more essentially interested, than in the protection of every individual's private rights."

LNC ALTERNATE VACANCY

The office of Alternate Representative to the Libertarian National Committee, representing Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, is vacant.

The alternate would represent our 3 states at the last two LNC meetings if the primary representative could not attend all or part of the meeting. The current Region 5 representative is Pennsylvania State Chair, Tim Moir.

The LNC meets three times a year around the country. The current LNC met July '96 in Washington D.C. after the convention, November '96 and April '97 again in Washington D.C., August '97 in Los Angeles, and December '97 back in D.C.

The LNC will meet in the Spring in Washington D.C., and in D.C. again in July before the 1998 National Convention. At the July National Convention, delegates from the Region will decide on a new primary and alternate for July 1998 - July 2000.

There are no eligibility requirements. The LNC is a board of directors. It oversees the running of the national Libertarian Party office in Washington. The national party has a $2.5 million dollar budget which is set by the LNC. The day to day operations of the party are done by the office staff.

Knowledge of running a small company, managerial experience, accounting knowledge or a background in law would be helpful.

The Regional Representative is also responsible for bringing any concerns of the states to the National Committee and reporting back the events of the LNC meetings to the states.

The decision on who will be that alternate is up to the state chairs of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware. A final decision will be made in mid-February. If you are interested in serving or would like more information, please contact:

NJL EDITOR PROPOSES BY-LAWS AMENDMENTS

The following changes to the NJLP by-laws are being proposed by Ed Wiessmann, who is also the Editor of the New Jersey Libertarian. Wiessmann hopes the NJLP membership will approve these changes at the March NJLP Convention:

- 1) Abolish the State Board
- 2) Provide that, if a Steering Committee Member is absent for three meetings in one year, his or her seat is vacant, effective at the calling of roll of the third missed meeting. The Steering Committee may then or afterwards do any of the following:
 - a) elect with at least four votes and two-thirds majority a replacement, or
 - b) leave the seat vacant, or
 - c) excuse an absence, reinstating the absent member
- 3) Assign the "At-Large" seats on the Steering Committee the following titles:
 - a) "Recruitment and Membership Officer"
 - b) "Fundraising Officer"
 - c) "Public Relations Officer."

NJLP Chair Len Flynn says Wiessmann's proposal will be considered, first by the By-laws Committee, and then by the Steering Committee and/or State Board.

MICHIGAN LP OFFICER RUNS FOR NATIONAL LP TREASURER

Mark Tuniewicz

On January 1, Libertarian National Committee Region 6 Representative Mark A. Tuniewicz announced his candidacy for National Treasurer of the Libertarian Party. The Treasurer will be elected at the Libertarian National Convention in July, 1998.

Tuniewicz, who first registered with the Party while a Boston College student in 1979, has served as Chair of the LP of New Hampshire. A resident of Rochester Hills, Michigan, he serves on the Michigan LP executive committee.

OPINION

I WAS RIGHT TO SUE LEONIA

According to the New Jersey state constitution, "No person shall be denied the enjoyment of any civil or military right. . ." (Article I, paragraph 5), and "Every person may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects. . . No law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. . ." (Article I, paragraph 6). Clearly, speech, whether political or nonpolitical, is protected by the state's constitution. Our elected officials take an oath to uphold the constitution, and it is incumbent upon them to protect the rights of the people.

My lawsuit against the Borough of Leonia for prohibiting the posting of political signs on homeowners' lawns was necessary because the police department, in effect, told my campaign attorney to sue the borough. When I placed several signs on my front lawn I had no idea there was an ordinance prohibiting this expression of free speech. Who would have thought that in 1997 a municipality was enforcing an ordinance which violated one of the most sacred rights we enjoy as American citizens?

My lawsuit could have been averted had the police department informed the mayor immediately and been ordered by him to cease and desist enforcing the ordinance until a review by the town council. Instead, because there was either no communication between the police and the mayor or miscommunication, my campaign sought immediate relief in the courts because there were only a few days left until the election.

Thus, if there is a moral to this story, it is clear. Before legislative bodies pass laws, they should seek advice about the constitutionality of any proposed ordinance. In this case, the lawn sign prohibition is demonstrably a gross violation of our free speech rights, and that it remained in effect for so many years is baffling.

OPINION

EDITORIAL: LIBERTARIANS AND ENTITLEMENTS

1997 was a year in which the Libertarian Party experienced serious growing pains. Harry Browne's campaign for President during 1996 electrified many old hands in the movement while attracting many new faces to the LP, nearly doubling our size in a year. Many of the newly energized stepped up to the plate as volunteers, donors, or as candidates for public office in 1997, particularly in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

A handful of those candidates and supporters, however, labored under a misconception which can cause unnecessary friction between individuals in the libertarian movement. They believe that other Libertarians have an "obligation" to donate money, time, and moral support to the campaigns of LP candidates.

In one respect, this misconception is understandable; we're constantly bombarded by politicians, the media, and public education with the message that we "must" help or financially support this or that cause, person, or group. This message is so pervasive that it's become a background fact that's taken for granted, like wallpaper. But that doesn't make it true!

Libertarians, especially those serving as candidates, should remember and remind their supporters that no one has an "obligation" to help anyone else, unless by prior agreement. Indeed, that is an obvious corollary of freedom; no person or institution is entitled to any more support than people will voluntarily give to him, her, or it. Further, those candidates should remember this principle in their dealings with other Libertarians. LP members do not "owe" support, which must be earned with persuasion, and should be gratefully and respectfully acknowledged when received.

For example, in the autumn of 1995, the Harry Browne for President Campaign sent an announcement of the campaign's latest activities and accomplishments, and ended the letter with a polite request for a donation, explaining what the money would be used for. A few days after a donation was sent, a postcard arrived, thanking the donor and assuring him or her that the money would be used wisely and frugally.

When another request was received a few weeks later, describing the good work the previous donation had accomplished, and explaining what another would be used for, the response tended to be favorable again. And again, and again, and again . . . until this editor had a wad of thank-you postcards a half inch thick, and the Browne campaign had done wonders for the libertarian movement. None of this would have happened if Harry Browne had started by announcing that LP members "owe it to me" to donate time and money to his campaign.

Strangers don't "owe" you anything. When the LP gets the public to understand that, America will be a free country once again. But it will probably happen sooner if we Libertarians all understand it ourselves.

OPINION

WHAT THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION DIDN'T TELL MARK RICHARDS ABOUT THEIR POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

Editor:

I'm responding to the NRA reply to NJLP member Mark Richards, which appeared in the November/December New Jersey Libertarian.

The NRA is not jokingly called the "National Republican Association" without good reason. It has repeatedly made protection of the Second Amendment rights of firearms owners a lower priority than upholding their political commitments. This letter, claiming to fairly and impartially assess all political candidates on the firearms issue, is typical of the lies they use in responding to such member inquiries.

As a committee member of the Association of New Jersey Rifle & Pistol Clubs (ANJRPC), the official state NRA affiliate, I learned firsthand in 1992 of the Republican/NRA connection after mailing, without formal authorization, an official ANJRPC Second Amendment political questionnaire to Libertarians on the ballot, as well as to D's and R's. The ensuing firestorm from both NRA and ANJRPC eventually resulted in the ANJRPC disbanding that committee. And, of course, New Jersey gun owners never saw the overwhelmingly pro-gun rights responses from LP candidates that year, or any year after.

A recent high profile example of this policy was the 1996 Texas Congressional race, where the NRA supported a meekly pro-gun-rights Republican in the primary election against Libertarian Ron Paul, who has an exemplary record of staunch support for the Second Amendment. Paul so angered Newt and the Republican hierarchy by winning the Republican primary that the NRA actually swung their support to the anti-gun-rights Democrat at the request of their Republican cronies.

While they tend to support Republicans, the NRA has, in fact, betrayed the rights of gun owners by supporting other anti-gun-rights Democrats as well. In this past November's election, New Jersey gun owners who followed NRA recommendations voted for many scoundrels, liars, and gun ban fanatics. A few of them:

- Republican Congressman LoBiondo, who voted for the Lautenberg gun ban;
- Republican Assemblyman Bucco, who publicly opposed repeal of the Florio gun ban;
- Republican Assemblyman Augustine, who received an "A" rating despite sponsoring the ban on "Saturday Night Specials," supported a hike in gun permit application fees, and authored legislation to ban any bullet which "expands, deforms or fragments";
- Republican Assemblyman Kavanaugh, who authored legislation boosting the fees for all New Jersey gun permit applications;
- Democratic Assemblyman Cohen, who voted for the Florio gun ban, co-authored legislation making a paperwork error in any gun sale transaction a felony carrying a 20 year prison sentence, and yet received a "B" rating from the NRA;
- Democratic Assemblywoman Buono, who joined Cohen as co-author of that paperwork legislation, and yet received the same "B" rating by the NRA;
- Republican Assemblyman Coredemus, who authored legislation to seize all firearms and revoke all gun permits of anyone committing a minor crime equivalent to bouncing a check;
- Republican Senator Gormley, who supplied Jim Florio with the critical vote that passed the "Assault Weapons" ban in 1989, has got the same "B" rating, and has been endorsed by the NRA;
- Republican Governor Whitman, who turned on gun owners after her 1993 election by refusing to correct the Florio gun ban, publicly opposed concealed carry legislation, signed the above mentioned Cohen anti-gun rights bill, publicly supported a federal ban on handguns, and who, after a lower court decision declared the Florio gun ban unconstitutionally vague, specifically instructed the state's attorneys to not appeal the decision - thereby upholding the Florio ban. For this she received a "B" rating and an endorsement by the NRA.

Such treachery on the part of the NRA and other so-called "pro-gun-rights" groups will continue until the average gun owner wakes up and recognizes that cherished freedoms have been deliberately betrayed for personal and political gain by the same individuals he or she currently trusts to protect them. It is obvious that the political loyalties and policies of the NRA and others are a barrier between New Jersey residents and their constitutional rights. Once that is understood, the Libertarian Party will become their one and only political choice.

NJLP LIBRARY

The NJLP maintains a lending library, containing books, pamphlets, and audio and video tapes, for the use of its members. The contents of that library will be listed here, in installments, over the next six months, beginning with the books. Members may obtain these items from Librarian Emerson Ellett, whose phone number and e-mail address appear on Page 7.
